Charles S. Jennings, 46, Magazine Editor, Dies

CPYRGHT Charles S. Jennings, 46, news editor on a Nieman Fellowship editor of U. S. News and World Report, died yesterday at Suburban Hospital of injuries he received in a home accident last week.

Mr. Jennings fell off the porch roof of his home at 4706 Hunt avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., last Wednesday.

He became news editor at the magazine in 1956, after serving 10 years in Europe with the Central Intelligence Agency.

A native of South Dakota, Mr. Jennings first worked as a copy editor for the Chicago Daily News, after he graduated from Northwestern University. He then went to Harvard University on a Nieman Fellowship. During World War II he was chief news editor of the Office of War Information before joining the CIA.

Mr. Jennings leaves his wife, Pauline, and three children, Charles, 14; Susan, 12, and Catherine Ann, 8, all of the home address. He also leaves his mother, Mrs. James Sayler Rainalter of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and two sisters, Mrs. Marianne Ellis and Mrs. Muriel Kohler, also of Sioux Falls. Another sister, Mrs. Joan Hunter, lives in Denver, Colo., and a brother, Hugh, lives in Los Alamos, N. Mex.

Funeral services have not yet been arranged.
